OCR Software Trial - an Overview

OCR software trial is a typical OCR software which is available on the internet. Trial OCR software enables the conversion of non-searchable image documents with text on them into searchable and editable text documents. This is done mainly to find the required information from huge scanned documents and also for appending information available in the file. Any OCR software can be used for this purpose, however, the other software change the file from PDF to a word processor format for edition. OCR software trial directly edits the content of the PDF file itself.

OCR Software Trial - the Need

OCR software trial allows users and companies that are planning to purchase the software for large scale use to test the software on a trial basis. The customer downloads OCR software trial from the software site and checks the performance of the software in areas such as accuracy, speed, bugs, and ease of use. The degree of automation and flexibility offered, such as scanning of specific portions are other aspects to test OCR software trial. OCR software trial may, on the other hand, only have limited features and functionality, considering most OCR software trials are free to download and use until the license expires. This gives the user enough time to gauge the performance of the software, and decide which software is best suited for their processes. The full versions that are paid for come with all the features and necessary updates. Thus OCR software trial enables customers to make informed decisions regarding their software purchases with regards to their requirements.

Benefits of OCR Software Trial

PDF files are gaining a lot of popularity and are used for bulk data storage. The computers can see the text in PDF and TIFF formats as an image only. This is because the image is embedded in the file. However, due to the misconception of the machines, searching for data within the PDF file will become a tedious process. This can be simplified by using OCR software trial which makes the document text searchable. OCR software trial can be used to search for data even if the number of files to be looked through is small. OCR software trial makes the task much easier because all the work is done by a computer.
